Dear [Salutation],

When I arrived in Philadelphia in 1976 to work as an assistant to the dean of Temple's College of Education, I couldn't have imagined that I'd be writing this letter nearly 45 years later, as I prepare to retire as the university's president. The opportunities I've had at Temple are indicative of the doors we open for our students.

Temple is a special place: a dynamic and diverse institution dedicated to real-world learning and to preparing students to be active citizens who are empowered—and prepared—to take on the world. And Temple will continue to be a vibrant hub of intellectual curiosity, critical discourse and civic engagement, educating and inspiring students, long after I retire.

It is with this in mind that I write to you today.

I'm proud that Temple has maintained a steadfast commitment to its core mission: to provide access to an excellent, affordable education for all those who seek it, regardless of circumstance. This commitment to our original mission is the pillar that our success is built upon.

Each of us plays a role in preserving that commitment now and into the future, and donors like you lead the way.

Temple has always been a place for discovery and innovation. In recent months, Temple faculty and clinicians conducted groundbreaking research and clinical trials for COVID-19 treatment. Faculty and students nimbly adjusted to remote and alternative learning. Our graduates adjusted course in preparation for post-pandemic careers, and our entire Temple family came together to raise voices in support of communities of color in Philadelphia and around the world. That's the Temple I know and cherish.

As a loyal benefactor for Temple, you make it all possible.

Increased academic excellence of our student body; attraction of top-notch and highly regarded faculty and groundbreaking accomplishments by alumni across the globe. Your generosity fuels it all. With your gift today you reaffirm your commitment to Temple and the good work that takes place here. Make your most generous donation and join me in bearing witness to the life-changing discoveries that our students, faculty and researchers will accomplish with our combined support. Thank you for being a member of the Temple family.

Sincerely,

Richard M. Englert
President, Temple University
